

Language Identification Organizer

Listen closely and check off each sentence or partial sentence as you hear it.

- The other talk was about what to do if a cop stopped me.
- Starr Carter is 16 when she confronts the exact situation her father warned her about.
- where she's only one of a handful of black kids.
- But there's also his past that sometimes is brought up.
- So she has to try to figure out who she is where she is.
- I had to fight even harder to show that I was intelligent and that I was capable of being there, just like my counterparts.
- He was an unarmed young black male who had a record.
- And honestly, there was inspiration from a lot of these cases that we see with unarmed black people losing their lives.
- So Khalil is a combination of a lot of what we see with young black men, particularly, when they lose their lives.
- There's a lot of people helping her on her journey. At the end, she kind of leans towards activism.
- she does find her voice through a certain form of activism
- I want to make you cry at times - so he was an influence in that way.
- And we see that in the form of anger and frustration.
- But that really got to the core of what I was trying to say and do in the book.